PROJECTS

Writer Bot - Python

- Developed an altered hash table ADT to write a text of a length specified by the user, based on a given input text using the Markov Chain Algorithm. Ensuring the outputted text had similar word and grammatical structure as the original text by group different "prefixes" with words that followed them.

Battleship - Python

- Created a simulation of the game "Battleship" using multiple classes to represent different aspects of the game. The program inputted and processed a game file and created a game board, placing ships in corresponding spaces and then simulated user moves from an additional input file.

Wordle - Java

- Created a replica of the game "Wordle" using multiple classes to represent different aspects of the game. This game was created in a team of 4, using GitHub as a main collaboration space for everyone. The program featured an intuitive design which featured different animations similar to the real "Wordle". Additionally, a user account system was implemented which featured local serialization and persistence.

SKILLS
